The study is currently in the planning phase and will be completed by the end of 2010. The study will be a cross-sectional study and will involve a survey of residents in the Southeast and North Portland areas. The survey will ask about demographic information, health status, and exposure to e-waste. The study will also involve blood and urine testing for heavy metals. The study will be conducted in a confidential and secure manner. The study will be approved by the Institutional Review Boards at MDHHS, CDC, and EPA. The study will be published in a peer-reviewed journal. The study will be a valuable addition to the scientific literature on e-waste and public health.
